

ABSTRACT

A braided intraluminal filter having large inlet ports, and methods for making the filter. Selected braid filaments are severed such that they do not extend through a proximal section of the filter. The un-severed filaments are divided into groups that are intra-braided into slender strands forming the proximal section of the filter. Large inlet ports are defined between the slender strands.